Message from the President

Dear Colleagues,

At the outset. I wish you a happy, healthy and prosperous new year 2018.

By your cooperation, we have been able to infuse new life in ILA during 2017. Just to name a few, ILA has been able to organise Two international conferences in a year, launched a new ILA portal with unprecedented facilities of Online Registration, Members' Database with search facility, Self updating the Members' Profile, Database of Minutes of General Body, Council and Executive Minutes with search facility; Publication of JILA Online, Publication of Printed JILA in new format; and Online ILA Newsletter (with a Database of retrospective issues) coming out regularly and punctually, etc.

Since the Online registration started:

Total number of Members registered = 344

Total Registration Fee collected = Rs. 4, 80,925

In addition to that, ILA has moved an application on prescribed format for allotment of a piece of land by DDA; An Application to UGC for Accreditation of LIS courses; Recommendations of service conditions and Pay scales of Librarians. While managing JILA, our Manager has worked hard to maintain the standard of the Journal academically as well as maintaining uniformity in its format. Consequently, there has been a substantial increase in the number of articles received for publication, which are first subjected to Plagiarism check and then the selected ones are thoroughly edited by me in consultation with the authors, as and when required. Finally, the articles are formatted by the manager and made it Online, before it is sent to the Secretary ILA for getting it printed. Though the printing quality was a bit better initially but the standard is unfortunately going down gradually, with the last issue being the worst of all. Dr Pardeep Rai, General Secretary, ILA has convinced the printer to get the issue published again and told him to take necessary steps for maintaining the quality of the journal.

With warm regards,

Prof Shabahat Husain

President, Indian Library Association

Professional News

- The Kindle changed the Book Business. Can It Change Books?

Amazon's e-book project comes to a crossroads. The Kindle team has always professed two goals: to perfectly mimic a paper book, and to extend and improve the reading experience. That's what readers want, too. In a world filled with distractions and notifications and devices that do everything, the Kindle's lack of features becomes its greatest asset. But readers also want to read everywhere, in places and ways a paperback can't manage. They want more tools, more features, more options, more stuff to do. Amazon is still working out how to satisfy both sides. Whatever route it takes, the next decade of Kindle is likely to be even more disruptive than the last. First it changed the book business. Next it might help change books themselves. The details of the news are available at: https://www.wired.com/story/can-amazon-change-books/?utm\_content=buffer39d7e&utm\_medium=social&utm\_source=twitter.com&utm\_campaign=buffer

- University of Rhode Island Library Opening Artificial Intelligence Lab

In the fall semester of 2018, a new Artificial Intelligence (AI) Lab will be accessible to all University of Rhode Island students on the first floor of the Robert L. Carothers Library. Funded by a $143,065 grant from The Champlin Foundation, the AI Lab is believed to be the first in the nation to be located in a library. The details of the news are available at: <https://web.uri.edu/engineering/ai-lab-to-be-accessible-to-all-uri-students/>

- Raspberry Pis as Catalog Computers

As library budgets and fundings continue to be diminished, we must look for creative outlets to increase reallocation. Libraries should also look to increase their usage of Free Open Source Software (FOSS) when available and see how FOSS directly aligns with the views and policies of the library system. We are effectively able to integrate both monetary reallocation and the usage of FOSS by replacing old catalog computers with Raspberry Pis. This report will detail an estimation of the initial investment and future reallocation by using Pis as well as explain how using FOSS helps patron privacy and overall security. The details of the news are available at: <http://blog.seanhaupt.com/p/rpi-catalog-computer-case-study.html>

- Germany vs Elsevier: Universities win temporary journal access after refusing to pay fees

The Dutch publishing giant Elsevier has granted uninterrupted access to its paywalled journals for researchers at around 200 German universities and research institutes that had refused to renew their individual subscriptions at the end of 2017. The details of the news are available at: <https://www.nature.com/articles/d41586-018-00093-7>

- The illiteracy-promoting interior design abomination called "backward books"

The rationale is that the pages of books provide a more neutral backdrop than those pesky spines, which detract from the look that the designers are going for, which seems to be a bland uniformity. A quick search revealed that there are a number of designers who think this is a good idea. The details of the news are available at: <http://www.joeydevilla.com/2018/01/03/illiteracy-promoting-interior-design-abomination-called-backwards-books/>

- Life Lessons from Chinese Children's Books differ from those in the U. S.

They created a list of "learning-related" values and checked to see how often the books promoted them. The values included setting a goal to achieve something difficult, putting in a lot effort to complete the task and generally viewing intelligence as a trait that can be acquired through hard work rather than a quality that you're born with. The results published in the Journal of Cross Cultural Psychology: The storybooks from China stress those values about twice as frequently as the books from the U.S. and Mexico. ## Personalia

Invitation for National Consultation with Policy Makers on Public Library Legislation and Policy

Prof. Shabhat Husain (Retd.), Deptt. of Library and Information Science, A.M.U. Aligarh and President, Indian Library Association was invited to attend the “National Consultation with Policy Makers on Public Library Legislation and Policy” in order to transform these spaces into new age Knowledge Institutions, organised by Indian Public Library Movement (NASSCOM Foundation, New Delhi) in collaboration with International Federation of Library Association (IFLA), the Hague, and Raja RamMohan Roy Library Foundation (RRRLF), Kolkata on 23-24 January 2018 at Taj Vivanta, New Delhi. Establishing a Public Library Network from State Capital to Village level is a state subject implemented through Public Library legislation. Since independence, only 20 states in India have been able to enact the Library Act, some of which have levied ‘Library Cess’, while others fully depend upon Govt budget. Moreover, the advent of ICT in Libraries by the turn of the present century has brought a sea change in their collections and services. As such the provisions laid down in some of the Public Library Acts, promulgated in various states since 1948 need a thorough revision and their Implementation. As of now, only 20 states in India have enacted Public Library legislation. The consultation meeting was attended by IAS officers and Librarians, heading the Public Library Network in their respective states. As some of the Libraries of National Importance directly come under the purview of Central Govt, it was represented by Ms. Sujatha Parsad, Additional Secretary, and Mr. Shравan Kumar, joint Secretary, Ministry of Culture. The meeting was attended by Dr. D.V. Singh, University Librarian, Delhi University Library System and Dr. Pardeep Rai, General Secretary, ILA along with other Librarians from different states.
