- UGC cell formed to cull dubious journals headed by Savitribai Phule Pune University staff

UGC's vice-chairman Professor Bhushan Patwardhan inaugurated the University Grants Commission's (UGC) National Cell for Journal Analysis on 5 January 2019 in order to weed out dubious journals. The cell is located in the Savitribai Phule Pune University (SPPU) campus and will be headed by Shubhada Nagarkar, Assistant professor, department of library and information science, SPPU.

In May, 4,305 journals out of 32,659 have been disqualified by the UGC from its list of approved journals owing to their dubious nature. This action followed a study published in the March 25 issue of Current Science journal which had reported a spurt in the number of predatory and dubious journals offering 'pay and publish' services to gullible authors.

Patwardhan said that the incidence of research articles published in poor quality journals is very high in India, which has adversely affected the academic reputation of the country. He said, "The UGC national cell in the SPPU will analyse all such journals and then the UGC will give final approval".

The UGC national cell will have representations from four zones with the north zone represented by the Jawaharlal Nehru University, south zone (Hyderabad University), west zone (Maharaja Sayajirao University of Baroda) and Tezpur University in the east zone.

To prepare and maintain a list of credible journals, the UGC had formed a consortium of academic bodies in November. This consortium will recommend the list of journals to the monitoring committee of the UGC cell for further action. It is a body of over 20 council members such as Indian Council of Social Science Research (ICSSR) and Indian Council of Philosophical Research (ICPR).

- Editorial Mutiny at Elsevier Journal

On Jan 10 2019, the entire editorial board of the Elsevier-owned Journal of Informetrics resigned in protest over high open-access fees, restricted access to citation data and commercial control of scholarly work. The same team launched a new fully open-access journal called Quantitative Science Studies on January 14, 2019. The journal will be published jointly with MIT Press. It will be for and by the academic community and will be owned by the International Society for Scientometrics and Informetrics (ISSI).

In a statement the editorial board of the Journal of Informetrics said that they were unanimous in their decision to quit. They contend that scholarly journals should be owned by the scholarly community rather than by commercial publishers, should be open access under fair principles, and publishers should make citation data freely available.

Elsevier said in a statement that it regretted the board's decision and that it had tried to address their concerns.

The Journal of Informetrics was started in 2007 and focuses on research of measures used to assess the impact of academic research, including bibliometrics, scientometrics, webometrics and altmetrics. Like Lingua it is also considered one of the top journals in its field.

There have been similar editorial revolts at journals owned by other publishers, many predating the Lingua case, but this method of so-called flipping journals from subscription-based access to completely open access is still relatively unusual.

- Library and Information Studies to change its name to Information Science

A resolution from the Faculty Senate to change the name of the Department of Library and Information Studies to the Department of Information Science has been approved and promulgated by President Satish K. Tripathi.

The change, supported by the faculty in Library and Information Studies and the Graduate School of Education, the school in which the department resides, reflects changes in the field of library and information science over the past 20 years, the resolution states.

"The focus on 'libraries' as a physical setting or entity has been replaced by a focus on 'information' as a phenomena, which is relevant to libraries, but more importantly is explored in a range of organizational contexts, workplace contexts and individuals' daily life contexts, Information science' is the contemporary and correct term used for the field, as it reflects our scientific, systematic approach to research problems."

Obituary

Dr. Kautilya Shukla, former President, Indian Library Association passed away on 12th January 2019. The whole profession of Library and Information Science in India in General and the Indian Library Association in particular got stunned on the sudden and sad demise of Prof (Dr.) Kautilya Shukla. Though Dr. Shukla is unfortunately no more with us, yet the community of Librarians and Teachers of Library and Information Science will remember him not only for his scholarship, but also for his friendly behaviour with one and all. For some, he was a great friend, philosopher and guide. The void that has been created by his heavenly journey can never be filled up. However, as they say, the one who is adored the most by the God is the one who achieves eternal life.

Dr. Shukla served the Library profession in India for about 35 years in more ways than one. During his life time, he had authored 5 books and 40+ research papers at national and international level and guided 4 Ph.D. & 50 MLIS dissertations. During his active professional life, Dr. Shukla was awarded Best Librarian award for the Year 2005, Best University Library award for 2006, Excellence award for IT application and Networking 2006 and Gujarat Gaurav award for Education in 2008. He was also awarded fellowship to participate in the coveted UGC/CIDA research project at Canada in 1991. He had widely travelled for various professional assignments to Canada, Japan, Singapore and Hong Kong. Dr. Shukla served as the President of Indian Library Association from 2007 to 2010, in which capacity he did a commendable job for the upliftment of the Association.

On behalf of the office bearers of ILA and its Executive Committee Members, We pray the Almighty that his soul rest in peace. EC, ILA
